“ You were always so consistent when it came to reaching out, I thought you'd simply gotten busy with all of the craziness going on in the world, and figured we'd talk sooner or later. I never dreamed the next time I would see you would be through your obituary two months after your passing. The fact that I found out so late is almost as painful as having found out at all. We only dated casually for a short time, but you stayed a good friend of mine afterward, and I always appreciated your encouraging messages and fun personality. The world is a lot emptier without you in it, Jeremy--- and I give my deepest condolences to your family, friends, and girlfriend who all loved and still love you so much. I'll make sure to follow through with our Gelato plans after COVID, just for you buddy. May you rest in peace.

“ It's been a little over 2 months now since you've passed and it still doesn't seem real. Not a day has passed that I haven't thought about you and your loved ones. Your humor and kindness will always be truly missed. You were an incredible friend to me for the many years I knew you. And for that, I will forever be grateful to have had you in my life. So thank you Jeremy for all the great years full of laughter and memories. We will all see you again someday, until then rest easy ☐

“ I first met Jeremy one summer day during summer school, although we never talked to each other until he ran up to me one day after math class the next year. Me and Jeremy had this bond, and it was a bond I've never had with anyone else, and I'm always going to cherish it. I've always cared about him, and I am going to miss him like crazy. R.I.P Jeremy

“ I remember when I met Jeremy in 2016 and he was in my PE class from 2016-2017 and we talked a lot about the Ford F-250 7.3 powerstroke and the Ford F-250 6.7 powerstroke and he always cheered me up by distracting me from my teenage hormonal stage and the last time I ever saw him was at Jonathan Cuaresma's funeral back in August 2019 and that was it he had a heart of gold and supported my love for diesel trucks.

“ The earliest memory I have of Jeremy happened when we were in 7th grade. In our morning class, he would sometimes use his school-issued laptop to look at memes instead of doing the work. He got caught by our teacher a couple of times, and I found that funny. I had been intrigued by him since then, because I didn't know anyone else at the time who understood what memes were (this was 2011, when the word 'meme' wasn't even part of everyday language yet). I felt drawn to him even before we became friends because he had a cool, calm demeanor, and I figured we'd have the same sense of humor because we both liked memes.

Later in the school year, he started talking to me. I was happy that he approached me, because it meant he felt drawn to me too. Jeremy and I became fast friends. He introduced me to new music, including one of my all-time favorite bands: the Dead Kennedys. Jeremy was always kind to me, and I could tell he cared for others in a quiet, reserved kind of way. He was popular and well-liked, but he remained humble and never let his high status get to his head. He was loyal to his loved ones and would have done anything for them. I will always miss him and cherish the memories we've shared together.

“ I remember meeting Jeremy in the 7th grade. We were both in orchestra and we had this joke that he played the double bass (the biggest instrument) because he was so tall and I played violin (the smallest instrument) because I was so small. He was one of the first people to offer me kindness when I moved to clovis and went to Granite Ridge and our group of friends that we were apart of meant the world to me. I cant believe he's not with us and I will miss him so much. I'll never forget his jokes and kindness and I'm so glad that we met.

“ What to say, my nephew? Let God receives you and have your eternal life. You will miss you forever but know that someday we will meet again.

“ Jeremy was a very sweet young man. He was good friends with our daughter Megan for many years. They had lots of fun together and we loved seeing him when he came to visit. We are so sad that this happened. We will miss him.

“ Jeremy Kilabi

I miss you buddy...thank you for always lifting me up whenever I was down I remember hanging out at the lake on senior ditch day where we just did the most random things.. but most of all I won't forget the day you drove me around in your blue car when I was sad and ate mac and cheese because we both couldn't go on the senior trip to universal. (Wish we had taken photos together that day) The memories we shared will stay with me forever, thank you for being such an amazing friend & now my forever angel. My condolences to your family I'm praying for you during this time.
