Mommy it’s been 4 years since you left me. The day of your death is burned into my soul. That terrible time will never leave me. I still hear your voice calling me. I see you walking in the garden. I hear you telling me to make the lawn pretty. I see you sitting at the dining table in your special chair. I see you eating breakfast and saying your meal was good. While you looked out into the garden. Enjoying the morning and smiling your smile.

I remember your wisdom. I used to argue with you about how things should be the lawn, laundry, people, life, etc. I have found out the hard way that you were right. I should have listened to your wisdom. Ever time I work in the yard, go shopping, or speak to someone. I think, Mommy was right. Mommy you are always with me, although some of the pain of you leaving me has subsided. The grief your death gave me will always be with me. I have a hole in my heart. I miss you Mommy. I always will miss you. I often wonder if you knew how much I loved you.

You are gone. I ache for you, I am no longer blessed with your presence. Mommy when you left me part of me died too. You slipped away quickly before I could get all of your insight, your knowledge, your memories, your expertise. How I long to hug you, to touch you, to feel your presence.

Mommy you died with things left unsaid. You left before I could tell you everything. I yearn to speak to you to share with you. I hunger for answers to the questions that are in my heart. Everyday, I think of you and I wonder.

Mommy I keep asking myself if you knew. That your smile light up the room. That your laughter made your eyes twinkle. That when your image fills my mind my heart overflows with so much love for you. Did you know your influence was endless? That I honor you now in every possible way?

Mommy did you know you were loved? Truly loved. A love so deep, so pure, so effortless, that it occupies a part of my heart and soul that no other love will ever replace.

Did you know your life inspired me? Did you know how much you changed my life? Mommy you were more than a Mother you were my teacher, best friend, counselor, nurse and so many others. Did you know all that you were, your greatness? Did you know that you cannot be replaced, cannot be forgotten, that you are so intensely missed it changed me forever?

Mommy you are missed and loved more than words can describe. Mommy you were everything to me. Your smile, your laugh, your touch, and your life are irreplaceable. Losing you broke my heart and changed me in ways I never imagined.

You taught me love, patience and endurance. You taught me how to pray and led by example. You praised me whenever I did good and pointed out my mistakes with that gentle voice. You encouraged me to work hard in school and taught me how to read and write. I still remember your voice as you sang to me at bedtime. Mommy in my heart you will remain forever.

Grief never ends... But it changes. It's a passage, not a place to stay. Grief is not a sign of weakness, nor a lack of faith... It is the price of love.
