“ RIP my friend & co worker. I will never forget when she told me the story of how the huge dent got in the side of her car that she drove at the time, which was about 15 years ago. She had me in tears, happy tears. The story she told and the way she told it was and still is one of the funniest things I have ever heard. I literally had her repeat it to me 3 times that same day because it was just too funny not to. I never forgot it. Since I moved to swing shift a few years ago, I would run into Delphene a few times a month or so and each time I would say to her, "Hey Delphene, remember the glasses?" We would both just laugh knowing exactly what it meant. LOL. I will miss that contagious laugh. Never forgotten and always missed.

“ Delphene was the sweetest person who made me laugh. We were coworkers and at one point about 15 years ago Delphene and I had desks that sat next to one another. One day, between calls, she told me the story about how she got this huge dent in the side of the car she was driving at the time. As she told me this hilarious story it became too much for me and I was in tears. I had her repeat the story three times that day because it was way too funny to not. LOL to this day. We eventually moved out of the same unit but every time I ran into Delphene over the past 15 years since she told me the story, I would just say, "Hey Delphene, remember the glasses?" We both would just laugh knowing what it meant. Her laugh was contagious. I will miss you Delphene. RIP my friend. Tell that story to the good lord Delphene, he will love it. Forever Missed.
