“ Not a day goes by that I don't think about you...but today was especially hard because the sun was out and it was a beautiful day. I could feel the warmth of Sun's rays on my skin. It was almost like it was a spring or summer morning. It reminded me so much of you. Although you passed on a rainy day in January, the warm weather brings me the most memories of you. I guess it's because that was always the time I needed you. This was also of course your busy season. You were always happy to be needed and busy at work. I would call you requesting your help with some home diy project. You were always happy to help. So many memories of you working on our house and the old house on Grant flooded my mind. I had to fight back the tears in my eyes. I'm thinking of all the things we have planned and how you won't be here to help me. I'm thinking of my wedding day and how you won't be here to walk me down the aisle. It's been a month since you've passed and I don't know if I've accepted it yet. I don't think I've even allowed myself to fully grieve. I miss you so much and I can't seem to let go. I can't even bring myself to disconnect your phone. I don't why.... as if leaving it on will make me feel like a part of you is still here....that's crazy, I know. I know that you're in a better place and that you're at more peace than you ever were here.... but I still miss you...and i don't know if I'll ever stop....and I don't know if I'll ever be ok.
