“ My dear friend,

You don't realize how much a person meant to you until they're gone they say...this is true. You where the friend that was there during the "hard times" and still cheering me on, praying for me and happy for me in the "good times." I met you in 2004 when I was only 19, alone with my 4 month old baby...you where my neighbor and became my best friend or like you would call me, "more like twin sisters!" We both had long dark hair and when I would lighten it you would get so mad at me lol. In 2005 someone made a fake MySpace account of me and used your pictures because they thought you where ME! We forever laughed about this for years! When I would run out of food, you would share your food stamps. You where the ONLY one to share a plate of hot food with me and my baby when my family would close their door on me. You where that type of person, even if you didn't have much yourself. You babysat and loved my Madelen while I worked full time and attended college. You where so strong and I admired you. You would steal my clothes and when I would get mad at you so I wouldn't want to share my WIC milk with you lol. You would protect me, pray for me, encourage me, help me and laugh with me. You where a great mom to your babies, one of those moms that bakes cupcakes, loves and taught manners and respect. You where giving. You loved God....you really really loved God and believed in the power of prayer!

With our busy lives we hadn't made time to hang out again in years but when my Madelen came out, you where there at PRIDE parade in the Tower to show her your love and support!

You meant a lot to me friend.

This past week I've slept every night thinking about you and woke up every morning thinking about you and I already miss you my beautiful friend. You didn't even get to read the last message I had sent you.....see you in Heaven!

Love,

Cindy

“ Our Beautiful Cousin(Cuzin) Lori was the oldest of the Hernandez Brat pack. I don't think she realized exactly what that meant to us youngsters. Dave and I re-entered the family atleast a decade after our parents divorced. As you can imagine this could have easily felt like meeting a very large group of strangers. Lori would be one of the first cousins to welcome us home. Lori would also be the only cousin old enough to have memories of us and our parents together. Lori never forgot us. We had no idea what her loyalty and love would mean as the years passed. In our adult life a beautiful fusion of family and friends began to take place. Lori would never let too much time go by without reaching out, planning a visit or just call to get caught up on our lives. Lori would become a constant support through some of the most trying times of my life. Lori had great faith God would not only heal, but carry her through anything this world would try her with. She never lost faith God had a plan for her and she always reminded me the same. In our hearts, memories will keep her close, until our next reunion. In the next life our reunion will be the best yet! A place where sorrow, illness and death does not exist. We love you, miss you and can not find words to describe the vacancy in our hearts and lives. Beyond this life, Lori extends knowledge. Do not let too much time pass without reaching out to the ones you love. If tomorrow does not come, you have today to say your "I love you bye's" or " I love you more's".

“ My mom was one crazy lady, like super crazy. But one thing she also always was was a momma bear. There wasn't anything she wouldn't do for her Cubs (or what she liked to call her tribe). I was the annoying one that always messed with her and she would always tell me “get away from me nasty!”. It was my goal every time I was with my mom was to mess with her because it made me laugh at her reaction. There are many memories that no one will really understand, so instead I'll just tell you what kind of person she was. She was a tough strong woman, no one and I mean no one could ever phase her. But she was also a kind and genuine person, whenever someone new met her they automatically felt welcomed and loved because she never judged anyone. She taught me love is love and that underneath the color of people's skin is the same colored blood. She taught me forgiveness and to follow the path God paved for me, to have faith in God and to never doubt him. She taught me that everyone deserved second chances... she was the type of person you only meet once in a lifetime. She was amazing and beautiful and funny, and I miss her dearly. I love you mommy, I look forward to the day I get to see you again. I hope I can make you proud, rest in paradise beautiful.
