

Mark Duane Davis

February 22, 1955 - November 2, 2025

Mark Davis Lived life the way he played and coached baseball – with heart, patience, and an unshakable love for his team.

He believed that every inning mattered, every person counted, and that the real victory was showing up, doing your best, and loving the people beside you.

Weather he was working long hours, coaching under the lights, or driving miles to see a grandchild play, Mark gave his time and strength without hesitation. He led by example – quiet, loyal, and steady - teaching that grace and courage are found in how we handle life’s curveballs.

Those who knew him will remember his laugh, his kindness, and the way he turned ordinary days into moments worth cheering for. Though the final game has ended, his legacy continues in the hearts of his family, friends, and every player he ever encouraged to step up to the plate.
