“ I only met Norman twice. I was with his niece, Alice, when we met. He impressed me with his ease of just sitting down and talking. I walked away feeling like I had just talked with one of my oldest and best friends. Norman loved his family and radiated great pride when he would speak of them. He was content with life and believed you make your own happiness or your own sadness. It was evident that Norman chose happiness. He gave the best handshakes and hugs.

“ Uncle Norman had a great sense of humor and love for family. He loved kids and always had time to sit and listen to us. Norman was quite smart. However, he did not have a need to have to boast about his wisdom. He was comfortable talking to anyone about anything. I wish that he and family had lived closer. I would have enjoyed more time with him but am thankful for the time I had.

“ Norman was my brother-in-law. I loved his positive attitude about life even when life wasn't always the best for him. Norman had a devoted love for his family and they were always at the center of his heart and world. Norman had a great smile and even greater sense of humor. He will always be a cherished friend and family member.

“ Since most of my memories of Uncle Norman center around the family trips back to MN, most of my memories of him center around his pulling the camper and going fishing. Since I so looked forward to seeing my cousin Cheri, on each visit, he was a super hero in making the trek back to MN. Since no one in my family were fishermen or campers, I think my love of both came from talking to him. He taught me how to tie on a hook and how to know what weight to use. He, also, showed me how to level the camper using the level. I loved his sense of humor and patience with this country hick niece. I loved electronic gadgets and he didn't mind talking cameras and electronics with me. I hold my memories close in my heart..
