“ My favorite memory is when we would be visiting our Nana, and Dad's train just happened to run behind nanas apartment. He would honk the train horn, and my sisters and I would run down to the fence. You would see a tiny dad waving from the caboose as he inched closer and closer. Just as he passed in front of us, he would launch a message in a water bottle over the fence and disappear into the distance. My sisters and I would sit under a shady tree, open the bottle and read the note that would often say," tell mom we are going to the drive in." Love-Dad.
