“ I'm heartbroken to hear that Miss Stringer is gone, but grateful that she's not here to see some of the ugliness today.

She was my teacher in Boulder years ago, and far and away my favorite teacher. She's the reason I got into computers and technology and ultimately probably the reason I work in cybersecurity now. I owe all of that to her and her influence and fostering my natural inclination of exploring the things I was curious about and instilling the value of always learning from that.

She made it feel worthwhile to be smart and to work hard and use it to the best of my ability, and demonstrated the value of always being generous with my knowledge and showing me how much difference it makes to help and to teach others anything you can.

Thank you, Miss Stringer! You were a great teacher, an amazing human being, and an exceptional role model. I hope we get to meet again one day.
