“ *My Mother
My quarrel partner
My best friend*

*Beauty and Grace
Though her expression of faith*

*Comfort and tears
She helps calm my fears*

*Love and Life
She is always my guide*

*There will never be another
She is forever my Mother*

“ There always was an elegance, a grace about Shirley Chanese. She kept her home in excellent order, with the living room ever ready for company, with its view of the backyard. She always was well-dressed and well-coifed (I remember it usually as a bouffant style) -- and always the perfect hostess for her guests. Definitely made an impression on a young girl! I'll always think of her when seeing black lacquer furniture with either a Japanese or Chinese motif, or artwork of white egrets on a silken gold background, or kimono-clad dolls; they always seemed to be part of her décor. This world -- and my world, too -- is a better place for having her a part of it.

May the peace of our Lord surround each of her family members and His peace comfort each one. There will be a grand reunion day in the future -- and Shirley will be with us again, in heavenly splendor.
